TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Virginia, one of the thirteen original states, included, in 1790, the areas now constituting Kentucky (admitted to the Union as a separate state in 1792) and West Virginia (admitted to the Union as a separate state in 1863). According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 2,309,187, which represents an increase of 247,575, or 12 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of Virginia from 1790, the first Federal census year, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole. The population shown for 1790 does not include that of the present state of Kentucky, but the population given for each census year prior to 1870 includes that of the present state of West Virginia. The population, at censuses prior to 1870, of the present area of Virginia was as follows: 1860, 1,219,630; 1850, 1,119,348; 1840, 1,015,260; 1830, 1,034,481; 1820, 928,558; 1810, 869,131; 1800, 801,608; 1790, 691,737.

Counties.—Virginia has 100 counties and 20 independent cities, each of the latter having the same status as a county. (See Table 1.) No new counties have been formed during the past decade, and no changes in county boundaries have taken place except those resulting from the annexation of parts of counties to independent cities. Of the 100 counties and combinations of counties with independent cities presented in Table 1, 63 show increases and 37 decreases as compared with 1910. In the preparation of

POPULATION—VIRGINIA.

Tables 1 and 5, and of the maps on pages 4 and 5, showing rates of increase or decrease and density of population, by counties, the independent cities have been combined with the counties in which they are located.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 40,262 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 57.4 (see Table 1), as against 51.2 in 1910 and 46.1 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of Virginia are made up of 445 primary divisions, comprising 444 magisterial districts and 1 city, Williamsburg, in James City County. The secondary divisions are 182 in number, consisting of 181 towns and 1 city, Hampton, which is coextensive with the magisterial district in which located. Each of 12 towns comprises parts of 2 or more magisterial districts. In addition to these minor civil divisions, Fort Monroe is returned in Chesapeake district, Elizabeth City County, and is treated for census purposes as forming a part of that district, although independent of the county or district organization. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—Virginia has 22 cities, of which Richmond, with a population of 171,667, is the largest, and Norfolk, with 115,777, is second in size. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 15,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Virginia living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 18.3 per cent in 1900 to 23.1 per cent in 1910 and to 29.2 per cent in 1920.

[As most of the 29 cities shown in this table have become independent since 1850, they are presented in combination with the counties in which they are located, and of which they formerly formed parts, in order to secure comparable population figures for the several censuses covered by the table. For population of counties and cities separately for 1920, 1910, and 1900, see Table 2; for previous years, see earlier census reports.]
